It's a good idea until Sean begins to remember his early years on the island. The grown-up Sean travels with his best friend, Tristan, and together they set off on an adventure that may prove to be more than they bargained for. Review. I was looking for something different, something that takes a risk with its storytelling. Something outside of the norm. I'd just finished watching the TV show Lost and was looking for something like that. The movie does have a few themes that play out similar to Lost, and has a lot of the same plot twists, but there are a few things that are special to this film. For one, this movie had me hooked from the first frame. I was worried that it would be cheesy and just a movie for the fans, but it really was a good movie for everyone.

The kids would love the Disney Channel-style presentation. The parents would be entertained by the light hearted and silly humor. And everyone would find the story engaging and surprising. It has a great balance of goofy and emotional moments. The movie is set in a world that is similar to our own, but is a few hundred years in the future. It takes place on an island, the story is told through split screen and cross cuts, and characters who look like your typical Disney Channel characters. The story has all the elements of a typical movie, but plays out differently. There is a mystery that the characters will have to solve and characters that are not as stereotypical as the other ones you will see. The characters are all likeable, and even though there is a supernatural element to the plot, it is easy to understand the reason that these characters want to go back to their roots. When they decide to return home, I did not find myself thinking it was corny or melodramatic. It was a classic "I'm going home" story. The fact that the characters are so likeable makes it easier for the audience to follow along with the story. The humor is just like that of the TV show, but there is a sense of humor to the film that is more than just the jokes. Instead, there is a playful sense of fun to the way the characters speak and act. There is a genuine love for what the characters do and say. Speaking of the characters, there is a cast that can make you feel like you are just sitting in a movie theater. The actors and actresses are all good, and I thought that there 82157476af
